

Iterating towards Bethlehem

(or, making the shift from a “packaged software” guy to a “hosted services” guy)

August 2, 2006 :: SVPMA

Michael Sippey
GM, TypePad :: Six Apart, Ltd.

About me.

<http://sippey.typepad.com/>

(Lifelong geek, English major, writer, product manager, consultant, business guy, blogger, amateur designer, spreadsheet geek, father of two.)

About the title of this deck.

W.B. Yeats, “Slouching Towards Bethlehem”

Turning and turning in the widening gyre
The falcon cannot hear the falconer;
Things fall apart; the centre cannot hold;
Mere anarchy is loosed upon the world,
The blood-dimmed tide is loosed, and everywhere
The ceremony of innocence is drowned;
The best lack all conviction, while the worst
Are full of passionate intensity.

About Six Apart, Ltd.

Bust 1.0

(circa 2002)

Web 2.0

(January 2005)

Act 1

(Let's rewind the clock a bit.)

Name that product!

“Packaged” software was truly packaged software

Disks. Disk labels. Disk sleeves. Manual. Manual addendum. Installation guide. Welcome letter.
Invoice receipt. Box. Shipping box. Shipping label.

Anyone feeling nostalgic?

Software life cycle.

define > design > build > test > release

elapsed time: 12-24 months

(How about now? Feeling nostalgic yet?)

What was my job back then?

Getting everyone in the van.

Market Validation

Is the market real?

How big is the market?

Does the product fit the market?

What are the sales costs?

How we did it.

Find 30 prospects. Set up meetings.
Demo your idea / alpha / beta / product.
Ask questions. (Lots of questions.)
Take copious notes. Score your results.

Critical questions.

Do you have this problem?

Does this solve your problem?

How much would you pay for this?

Base hit or home run?

How would you spend $100 of our money?

We always* learned new things.

Occasionally, we learned very new things.

Act 3

(also known as ~~Bubble~~ Web 2.0!)

(Everyone knock on wood three times.)

Let's build a product.

Let's ~~build~~ a ~~product~~.

Let's iterate a service.

We've learned the hard way.

July 4th weekend, 2005: TypePad 1.6

“Let’s change how users design their blogs. And how they’re rendered. And how users manage their communities. And most of the app’s JavaScript. I mean, hey! If it’s this big already, what’s one more thing? We get more bang out of QA, right?”

What went wrong that weekend scarred everyone involved.

(“Dude, you just had to be there.”)

We didn't learn right away, though.

We had to iterate to iterate.

What's the right periodicity?

~~One month~~

~~Three weeks~~

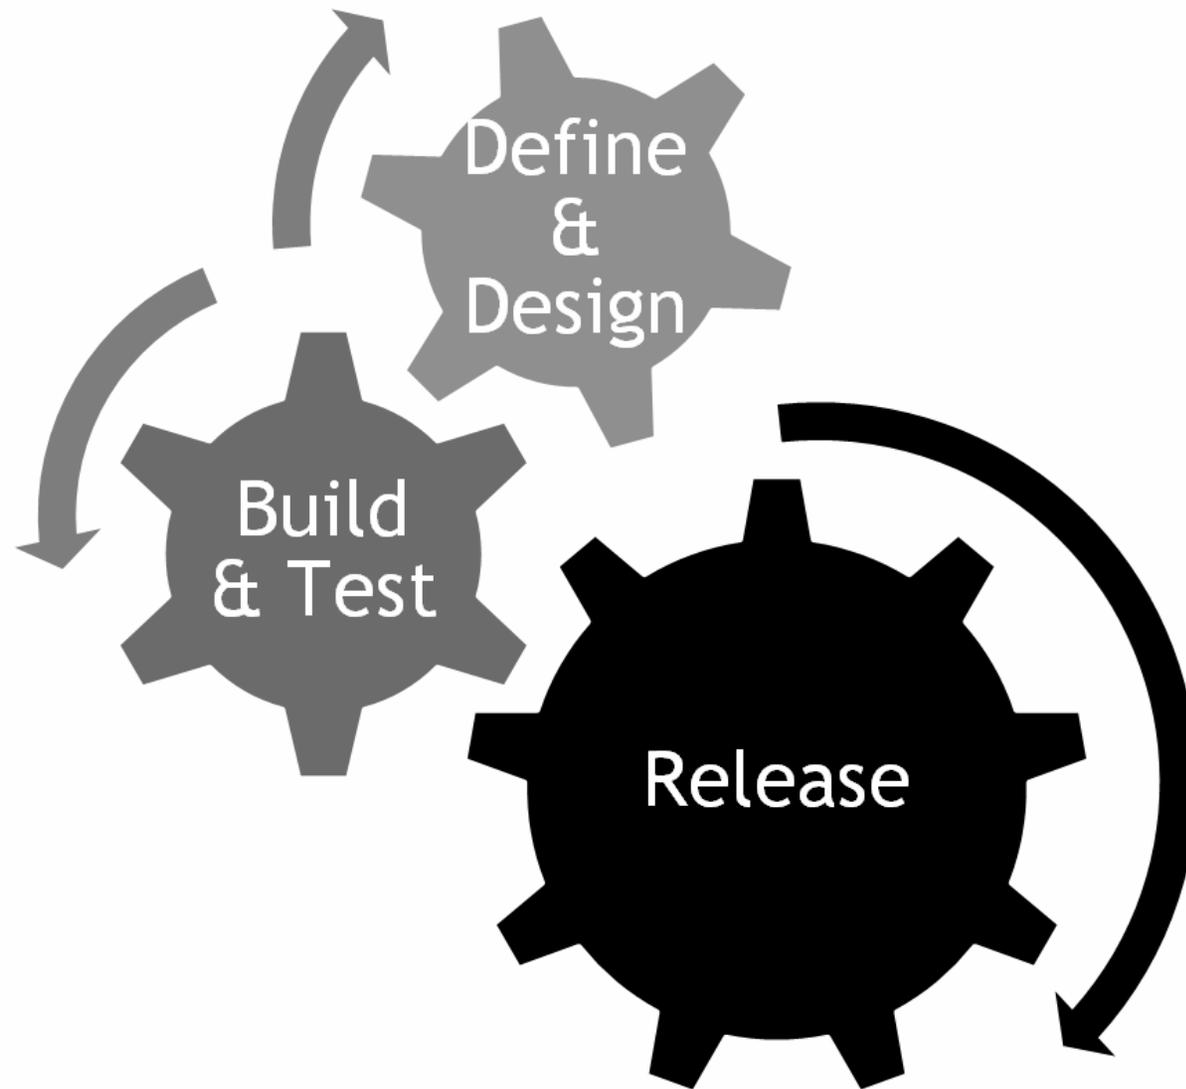

~~One week~~

A release every two weeks

~~Software life cycle.~~

~~define > design > build > test > release~~

~~◆————◆
elapsed time: 12-24 months~~

(I had to use some of the new fancy clipart in Office 2007.)

LJ at OSCON

Some of the best and brightest minds of the Open Source world (the stuff that makes LJ tick!) are gathering in Portland, OR, this week for a yearly get together. Six Apart is sending a large contingent to OSCON, including @crucially, @whitaker, @anildash, @xb95, @btrott, @bulknews, @markpasc, @byrnereese, @teknikill, and @bschoate. They're giving several talks including LiveJournal's Secret Spinoffs, Trying to Suck Less, and Stump the Band. Being open source means that the guts that make LiveJournal go are totally free for anybody to use, so they help power sites like Wikipedia, Craigslist, DeadJournal, Slashdot, and dozens more.

August is going to be hott

Stay tuned for some exciting news next month. We'll be launching LJ Talk, LiveJournal's own instant messaging service, in the first part of August. You may have heard a little about it already, and there will be even more discussion during OSCON since LJ Talk is a Jabber implementation. You can read the more technical stuff here, or just wait a few weeks until it's ready to launch with some quick and clear instructions as well as an LJ Talk client with powerful voice and chat capabilities. We've been testing it and we're all already addicted!
